

I'm writing to express my strong oposition to the proposed dropping of the cross-ownership ban. I can't believe anyone there really thinks this is in the best interest of the American public. This can only serve corporate interests. How can we expect to preserve a representative media when they'll all soon be bought up by huge corporations who have their own agendas in mind? These regulations were obviously put in place for a good reason. It should be evident that removing these kind of restrictions is harmful by the bland and unimaginative radio we all currently enjoy. I don't know anyone who thinks that commercial radio is worth listening to anymore. How much worse will it be to hand over the reigns of our news providers to these large corporate entities. Corporations, like government bureacracies, allow people to act without the restraint of their common human sense of decency since they are one step removed and shielded by the agency they represent. Come on, you can't seriously think this is a good idea. Is this the kind of world you want to live in? Not me.
